MUTINY ON THE GANGES.

Five Sailors of That Bark Acquitted of the Charges Brought Against Them.

Some of the Shocking Ill-usage Merchant Sailors Have to Endure at Sea.

Men Placed In Iron for Merely Requesting that Decent Food Be Served Them.

Peter Porkess, Michael Catella, Geo. Sams, Peter Voelock and Andrew George were each called by name in the provincial police court this morning. They were charged by Captain Budd, of the bark River Ganges, with mutiny, and with leaving the bark without leave.

A number of spectators, principally sailors, stood behind the railing. Magistrates Pearson and Shakespeare presided. Lawyer Walls sat surrounded by the prisoners, whom he represented. Lawyer Aikman was in consultation with Capt. Budd, when the count of absence without leave was called.

Captain Budd is a man of 50 and has a long heavy beard and moustache. He is thick set and short. His features are sharp and somewhat elongated. He was attired in a blue overcoat and striped nether garments. He held a soft felt hat in his right hand. This headgear he twirled around his fingers; occasionally he glanced at the presiding magistrates.

"Capt Budd take the witness box."

Lawyer Aikman thus addressed his client.

Capt. Budd took the stand. The five prisoners had absented themselves from the ship River Ganges on Friday last without leave. They left the ship at 9:30 in the morning and returned at 4:30 in the afternoon. He called them aft the following morning and asked them from whom they received permission to leave the ship. They replied that they had received no permission and said they wanted their wages and a discharge. On Saturday they again went ashore and returned at six in the evening. Capt. Budd swore he never gave the crew permission to leave the ship. Nor did first mate Wilson.

Lawyer Walls cross-examined the witness. He asked Budd what kind of food they received. Budd replied that the bread was good. A handkerchief lay on the table. It was spread open and upon it was "hard tack." Captain Budd was asked to take one of the biscuits and break it. The biscuit was broken and revealed a musty interior with thick layers of weevils. Other biscuits were in like condition. Capt. Budd did not manifest surprise. He coolly answered that the tank in which the biscuits were kept might have been a little damp. He considered them good food, but did not eat them himself. The men were treated well. He often gave them butter and sometimes marmalade with the biscuits.

The audience laughed and the justices could not restrain a smile. But Captain Budd was unabashed. The crew had never complained to him of their board and he had heard of no complaint being made to the mate. The cook once spoiled a dinner and he ordered a double allowance for the crew. The crew shipped at Rio de Janeiro for Victoria. Thence to the United Kingdom. Witness said that the men were Greeks, spoke English indifferently and that neither the British consul nor his assistant at Rio de Janeiro were present when the articles of shipment were signed. The office boy "fixed up" the matter. Michael Catella, one of the prisoners, had twice been put in irons. Once for using abusive language. He then remained in irons half an hour. A second time for assaulting the ship carpenter. This occasion he was 22 hours in irons. Witness denied that he put Catello in irons on the occasion for asking for better food, or that he drew his revolver upon Catello when in irons the second time. He had never read the log book to them.

First mate John Edwin Wilson testified that he did not give the men leave to go ashore. He referred them to the captain. There had been many complaints about the food. But that was nothing to him. He "grubbed" aft and did not eat the weevilled biscuits meted out to the crew. It was because Catello complained of the food that he was put in irons. Witness reluctantly admitted that there was a piece of iron, an oarlock, on one side of the food supply scales. And he would not swear that the piece of iron did not weigh against the men in their daily rations. The iron weighed 6 or 7 ounces. It had been removed since the ship entered Victoria harbor.

Lawyer Walls claimed that the offence, if any, was very light. The men had come ashore to enter a complaint against their treatment. They tried to see the captain, but he left the vessel early in the morning, so as to evade them. The fact that they had returned and remoored the River Ganges after she had broken from her moorings in Friday night's gale was proof that they were willing to work. They did this remooring of their own accord. Lawyer Walls argued that he could claim the case on a technicality.

Capt. Budd, after making the entry of the men absenting themselves without leave had not read the entry from the log book as required by the Merchants' Shipping Act.

The court dismissed the case with costs against the prisoners.

Lawyer Mills said that this could not be done. If the case were dismissed, no costs should be paid by the prisoners. But the court was fixed in its judgment. Lawyer Walls may appeal. The men were ordered to return aboard ship. Lawyer Walls said that he should advise them not to return. The charge of mutiny was dropped. Lawyer Mills was willing to go on and wanted to make further revelations. Mr. Aikman advised Capt. Budd to withdraw the charge.

Peter Porkess told his story to a TIMES man: "We shipped at Rio De Janeiro, on July 4th last. We were to get £3 a month to come to Victoria and thence to England. We had been only a few days out to sea when the weevilled bread was served out. Our other food was of the poorest, and sometimes it was decayed. We complained again and again to the captain and the mate, but obtained no redress. Then "Mike" Catello told the captain that we had put up with that treatment long enough. He was put in irons. When the men were sick they would receive no food. The carpenter was sick for four days. His food was stopped and because he would not take a nauseous glass of castor oil the captain told him to go on deck and go to work. We left without permission only because we could not see the captain. He kept out of our way. We asked him to buy better bread. We have been several days in port and he still dole out the decayed biscuits. We do not want to return to the ship. Mr. Geo. Vienna has been very kind to us. He has given us money to buy food. There is a report that we spent it in whiskey but we were too hungry to think of drinking anything. I hope we will not be obliged to go back to the ship."

And Peter Porkess turned around to his companions in sorrow. They said nothing, but the expressions of their faces indicated that they dreaded a renewal of their experiences.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 22.—The council last night refused to grant the Jute Manufacturing Company exemption from taxation.

Blotted Out by Fire.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 22.—The lives of an entire family were blotted out by fire this morning: Hiram Danahauer, 45; Mrs. Danahauer, 43; and a daughter aged 19. The Danahauer family lived in Pleasant Valley, O'Hara township, just outside the town of Sharsburg. They had a greenhouse in the basement of the house and placed a furnace in it yesterday. It is presumed the furnace became overheated, setting fire to the woodwork. The family died before the neighbors knew of their danger. When the fire was discovered the house had burned to the ground and the charred remains of the father, mother and daughter were found among the ruins.

The Monetary Conference—Miss Pabst Weds—Mrs. Deacon Wins Her Case.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—It is reported on good authority that an individual whose identity for the present is concealed has signified of Bishop C. Potter his intention to donating $500,000 towards the fund for the building of the new Protestant Episcopal church of St. John the divine. It is claimed that the giver of this princely sum is a well known and wealthy New Yorker, and one high up in the councils of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Opened By the Emperor.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—Emperor William officiated in person to-day at the opening of the Reichstag, his action being based upon his determination to emphasize the argument in favor of the military bill. The populace lined the route from the palace to the Houses of Parliament, and the Emperor, who rode on horseback with a detachment of cavalry as escort, was given a hearty reception. Contrary to expectation, Prince Bismarck did not make his appearance in the Chamber.

Rain Making Experiments.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 22.—Gen. Dyrenfurth and his rain makers will be ready to begin their experiments to-morrow. They did a little playing with the clouds this afternoon, but it was only a test of the power of the new roselite explosive. A twenty-pound stick of roselite was exploded by an electric battery. The concussion was terrific. It broke windows and crockery in houses for half a mile around. Two hours later another twenty-pound stick of roselite was discharged, but beyond a dense gathering of clouds, no effect was produced. A large number of cattlemen of Kansas, Wyoming and various parts of Texas arrived to-day to witness the experiments. Governor Hogg and other state officials will come on Wednesday.

Bi-Metallist Logic.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 22.—A. J. Warner, President of the American Bi-Metallic League, has issued an address to the people of the United States, in which, after noting that the Republican protective policy has failed to stop the fall of prices and bring about general prosperity, he says that the Democrats will make the same failure with tariff reform, and that they then will be thrown from power. He continues: "The rise and fall of prices are due to one cause, the increase in the money standard, that is in the value of gold; in other words, the changes in the ratio and not in the commodity. This evidently cannot be cured by tariff legislation. There is no remedy but to stop the increase in the value of the money unit, and until this is stopped the stealing by appropriation of the earnings of the people by the insidious device of an increasing money standard, will go on. Such a money standard is no more defensible or tolerable than would be increasing the unit of length or width of other values. The next issue, therefore, will be the money question, nor will this issue be long delayed. Its suppression by the two leading parties in the campaign just closed did not settle it. The people are being educated on the money question faster than politicians comprehend and they will not submit forever to the robbery of an increasing gold standard. Now is the time for bimetallists to organize and push to the front."

Delighted Democrats.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 22.—The recent election will be celebrated by the Democrats to-night in a monster meeting in the cyclorama building, and enthusiastic Democrats from nearly every county in the state are coming in on the morning trains to take their share in the general rejoicing. The entire Maryland delegation to Congress is to be marshalled on the platform, and Senator Gorman, ex-Secretary Bayard and probably Congressman W. Burke Cochran will do the talking.

Whiskey, Gas and Death.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 22.—The body of Anthony Newhouse, employed in the Homestead mill, who was found dead in his room last night, was brought to the morgue here to-day. Newhouse had the chills, and procuring a bottle of whiskey went to his room there he sat near the roaring gas fire. The escaping gas asphyxiated him and his body was so close to the fire that it was literally roasted. The body had been in the terrible heat over 24 hours. Every time the undertaker touched the body the part crumbled to pieces.

Life's Money Value.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 22.—Special labor commissioner Powers has prepared his report on the loss to workingmen by accidents, and finds it is annually $150,000,000; assuming the average value of each life destroyed as $5000. This is larger than the fire loss of the nation, and four times the amount of the interest of the bonded debt.

In Favor of Mrs. Deacon.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—The first chamber of the court of appeal to-day handed down a decision in the Deacon case. The judgment was given for Mrs. Deacon and ordered that the child Gladys be returned to the convent, where both Mr. and Mrs. Deacon will be allowed to visit her. Mr. Deacon was ordered to pay costs.

THE HALIFAX CONFERENCE.

Something More About the Objects of the Delegates' Negotiations—Confederation.

The Dreary Lives of Newfoundland Fishermen — Prospects of the Nickel Region.

From Our Own Correspondent.]

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—The general saying is that one has to go from home to hear the news. In the case of the conference now closed at Halifax, this would be the case, judging from a dispatch from Newfoundland, which says that the principal object of the meeting was to discuss the question of Newfoundland entering confederation. It will be a long stretch and "a far cry" from Vancouver Island to Newfoundland, the extreme west and the far east, should a union be consummated. At any rate the Newfoundlanders are in the belief that this was the prime object of both delegations assembling at Halifax. The Newfoundland delegates are Sir William Whiteway, Hon. Robt. Bond, Colonial Secretary, and Hon. A. W. Harvey, another member of the executive. It will be remembered that Bond was the gentleman who negotiated the treaty with Mr. Blaine between the island and the United States, but which was not ratified by the Imperial Government owing to the intervention of Canada. Mr. Harvey was, until recently, anti-confederation, but now has joined the confederation party. The dispatch says that if he were not in favor of confederation he would not be one of the delegates, showing that confederation must be uppermost in the minds of the Newfoundlanders, while our delegates stated before leaving that it was not one of the matters which would be brought up directly at the meeting. It is not likely that we, in Canada, will know exactly what has been done until Parliament meets. As for the Newfoundland Government, it is said that at its next session a resolution will be submitted to refer the whole question of confederation to a plebiscite, the terms first having been made known by Canada and discussed by the Newfoundland Legislature. Should a favorable verdict be given by this plebiscite confederation would be carried into effect at once without carrying it to the pol's in the general elections of 1893.

THE DEEP SEA FISHERIES.

Deep sea fishing is a comparatively undeveloped industry so far on the Pacific coast. Once full effort is made to develop them those engaged in following such an avocation will not experience the hardships nor privations which the hardy fishermen on the Atlantic coast have to endure. Speaking of Newfoundland, at any rate, it may be said that a large number of the inhabitants are engaged in deep sea fisheries at home and abroad. It is estimated that from 20,000 to 25,000 Newfoundlanders now fish in Labrador waters. They arrive there towards the end of June and return about the middle of October. Numbers of the fishermen take with them their wives and their children. Unmarried women can engage themselves as servants to aid in hauling the fish. The amount of female labor in Labrador is thus very considerable. At the lowest calculation a tenth part of those who resort to Labrador are females. Some estimate it as high as a fifth. It has long been known and admitted that the conditions under which this multitude of men, women and children carry on their labors are peculiarly hard, and in many instances entail severe sufferings. They are conveyed to and from this storm-beaten coast for the most part in small vessels, which are often fearfully crowded and utterly deficient in proper arrangements for passengers. They spend from three to four months in huts or "tilts" made of boards and covered with turf. Their toils are heavy; their whole surroundings in this dreary, monotonous life unfavorable and depressing. Cases of sickness are frequent, and serious accidents often happen. Nothing is done to alleviate their suffering or to help this mass of men, women and children, many of them extremely poor, ill-clad and often ill-fed. Of late years a doctor has been sent by the Government, who moves up and down the coast in the mail steamer; but the medical or surgical aid thus rendered is quite insignificant. It must be admitted that the condition of the Labrador fishermen is a standing discredit to the colony.

CHARITABLE ORGANIZATIONS.

In England there is a charitable organization known as "the mission to deep sea fishermen." Its operations commenced eleven years ago. Its object is to supply medical and charitable aid to British fishermen who ply their avocation in deep waters, far from land—as in the North Sea. The society has eleven vessels fitted up as hospitals, with a surgeon on board. These go out among the fishing fleet, even in the stormy winter weather, and in cases of sickness or accidents receive patients on board for treatment. Large quantities of warm clothing are distributed and other comforts. The spiritual condition of the fishermen also receives attention. Religious services are held on board the mission ships, to which the fishermen are invited. Wholesome literature is distributed. The change for the better brought about among deep sea fishermen by the ministrations of this benevolent agency is most striking. The mission has so commended itself to the confidence of the English people that it has now an income of from $20,000 to $25,000 per annum. Her Majesty the Queen is patron and she and other members of the royal family take a deep interest in the mission.

THE SUDBURY MINES.

Sudbury, some two or three hundred miles west of here, is the great nickel field of the world. For two seasons the business has been dull. Two things in particular have created a new and widespread interest in the nickle mines this fall. The first is the recent discovery of a new process for making nickle steel. Instead of the old and expensive method of first refining the nickel and then combining it to the steel, by the new process pig iron and ordinary matte, as turned out by the smelters here, will produce a better quality of steel at far less cost. As is well known, the United States government, after a series of tests, has adopted nickel steel armor for all the warships now under contract, and one of the mining companies here has for the past year been filling an order for $1,000,000 worth of nickel matte for this purpose, but the experiments of the British Admiralty are carried on more secretly and the results are not as well known. In voting the supplies, however, in the Imperial Parliament some months ago, Lord George Hamilton said: "Nickel steel has been experimented with largely. Four firms have succeeded in producing thin armor of this kind, and two firms have manufactured 10½ inch nickel steel plates. Extensive orders have been placed for thin plates for the battle ships now in process of construction, having been proved superior to ordinary steel when used in thickness of three or four inches." There was some doubt as to the superiority of the thick plates, but the trial of the American Harveyized plates (nickel steel plate tempered on one side), which took place in Portsmouth the other day, has finally settled the matter with regard to thick plates as well. All the governments of Europe must follow suit now and adopt nickel steel armor for their navies. Think of what an incalculable demand that will make for nickel in the future, and nearly all of it must be obtained from this district. In view of these facts, one is at a loss to account for the strange apathy of Canadian capitalists about investing in such valuable mining properties. But American capitalists are more wide awake, and see what immense fortunes are to be made in mining. They have bought up the greater part of the nickel range already, and are after the rest of it. For instance, a poor blacksmith sold a fine nickel property to a local dealer in mines four weeks ago for $20,000, but no sooner did the sale become known than an American company offered $40,000 for the claim, and it is held now at $100,000. It could have been bought last fall for $2000. There are dozens of just as good chances yet, as so many of the poor prospectors are especially hard up at this time of the year. Your correspondent knows a number of them who would sell at less than half the actual value of their claims just now.

The municipal health officers at Victoria, Nanaimo, Vancouver and New Westminster are to be appointed Dominion quarantine officers for the inspection of boats from Puget Sound and other places which do not call at Albert Head. The Government here has taken one more step in the direction of establishing a proper quarantine station, the engineer having been instructed to draw up plans for a wharf and buildings at Albert Head or William's Head. It is not yet determined which place is to be selected as the site.

SLABTOWN.

Scolded His Opponents

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—Ex Minister Herr Furth to-day attacked vigorously in the Prussian Landtag Miquel's Tax Reform bills. He spoke amid great excitement, and as he sat down, the house was in a condition of unparalleled confusion. Herr Furth's retirement from the cabinet was due to his difference with Miquel on the subject of tax reform, and to-day he did not hesitate to scold his former colleagues with the most biting criticisms. It was the ablest speech heard in the house for years. Herr Furth's vehement opposition to the government will smooth Bismarck's way for a similar course in the Reichstag.

They were conveyed in a special from Southampton to this city, where they were met by Henry White and other members of the United States legation.

Deliberation on this subject has no bearing on the general question.

The match for the Association football championship of Ontario was played at Preston on Saturday between teams representing Toronto university and Preston. It was won by the former by a score of one to nil.

A. W. Harvey, of Newfoundland, who is in St. John on his return from Ottawa, is rather pleased with what he has seen and heard in this country. He is still, however, opposed to confederation under existing circumstances.

Traffic Manager Olds, of the Canadian Pacific, says the rush of grain to the railway in Manitoba still continues. Up to Saturday some five million bushels have been reported, against three millions for the same period last year. Mr. Olds looks upon this as a splendid showing, and believes the increase has been maintained.

Senator Landry, proprietor of the Beauport lunatic asylum, at Quebec, has taken proceedings against Dr. Grandin for $20,000 damages for slander. The latter, it is alleged, claims that immoral practices were carried on in the institution. Two male lunatics criminally assaulted a female patient. This gave rise to the charges against the administration.

The trial of the action brought by Alex. McDougall, managing director of the Montreal Elevating Co., against Henry Mason, editor and proprietor of the Trade Bulletin, for alleged libel in an article in August, 1891, in which certain comments were made upon Mr. McDougall's conduct in reference to the prosecution of two men caught stealing from elevators, resulted in an acquittal of the defendant.

Reports have reached Port Colborne that the steamer Newbury and Str. No. 2 of the F. & P. M. Line went ashore at Long Point in Saturday's gale. A relief expedition will go out as soon as the weather permits. The crews are believed to be safe. The spars of a sunken vessel, supposed to have gone down in the same gale, are standing out of the water five miles off the same point, but with no signs of the crew.

The humor had a very offensive odor, and caused

Intense Itching

We cannot tell how that poor boy suffered in all those years. Physicians did not effect a cure. At last I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, as my druggist recommended it. In about two weeks the Sarsaparilla began to have effect. The sores commenced to heal up; the flesh began to look more natural and healthy. Then the scales came off and at over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles he was entirely free from sores, having only the scars to show where they had been. These have all disappeared. We are unable to express our thanks for the good

THE MONETARY CONFERENCE.

Meeting of the Delegates in Brussels and Preliminary Business

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—A dispatch from Brussels says: The International Monetary Conference opened here to-day. It is one of the most important international conventions of recent years, and the outcome of its deliberations will be anxiously awaited in financial circles the world over. No formality attended the assembling of the delegates, although a large crowd assembled outside the state department for the purpose of catching a glimpse of the distinguished men from abroad as they left their carriages and ascended the marble steps.

The large audience chamber of the department had been selected for the purposes of the gathering, and the delegates arrived in twos and threes, and were introduced to one another. The delegates from the United States were late in arriving.

The other nations represented were Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Austria-Hungary, Denmark, Belgium, the Netherlands, Greece, Roumania, Portugal, Spain, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland and Norway. The delegates from Canada had not put in an appearance. The German delegation was a distinguished one, comprising Count von Alvansleben, the German Minister to Belgium; Dr. von Glasenap, chief of the Imperial Treasury Department, and Herr Hertung, director of the Reishbank.

Belgium was represented by Superintendent Saintlette of the National Mint, M. Montefiore Levy, one of the leading bankers of the country, and M. Allard, one of the directors of the mint.

The Italian delegation was headed by Dominico Zeppa. The French delegates were M. Tirard, ex-minister of finance; M. Ligondairolle, director of the mint, and M. Foville, an official of the French ministry.

The delegates were welcomed by M. Beermaert, Prime Minister and Minister of Finance, and having performed that duty he excused himself from further attendance for the time being on account of pressing business in the Chamber of Deputies. Delegate Cannon of the United States was made temporary chairman, pending a formal organization.

It was announced by the British delegate that in accordance with instructions from Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, they would regard the conference as a purely deliberative body, and would be without the power to commit their government to any position that the majority might desire to take. The American delegates were then invited to state the proposals they desired submitted for discussion, and a committee was appointed to prepare a definite plan of procedure.

EXCITED FRENCH DEPUTIES.

A General and Disgraceful Fracas in the Chamber Yesterday.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—There was a scene of wild excitement to-day in the Chamber of Deputies. Jules Delahaye, the Boulangist deputy from Chinon, raised the question of the Panama canal prosecution. He denounced the government in the severest language, stating that the authorities had wholly neglected their duty and had permitted the gravest and most colossal crimes to go unpunished. He demanded that justice be done speedily, and that the men of influence and wealth accumulated by gigantic frauds be brought to exposure and punished. There was a clamorous scene. M. Delahaye and others affirmed his utterances. The deputies charged each other in express terms with a desire to protect the guilty ones. One speaker claimed that he could point out the men in the chamber who had shared the spoils. A dozen Deputies rose in an excited manner to ask whom he meant. The answer was lost in the clamor and confusion. Members shook their fists in each others' faces and several tried to climb the tribunal at once. The president rapped for order, but nobody seemed to hear. The melee was more general and disgraceful than any witnessed in the Chamber during the present republic. The Deputies called each other thieves and followed the insulting words with a challenge to the death. No less than three challenges were given for duels. M. Alexis de Lauray, Moderate Republican and Deputy for Beauvais, challenged Antoine Germain, Deputy for Trevaux and a member of the Left Centre. Boissey D'Aulai, member for Ardeche, challenged M. Delahaye, and Paul de Reculde, the noted Boulangist, challenged M. Hubbard, of Seine-et-Oise, anti-Boulangist. It was a bitter struggle, and the first really signal demonstration of the Boulangists since the downfall of their party. It was useless for the Government to oppose the onset, so the ministry yielded by consenting to the appointment of a Parliamentary commission to enquire into the charges of corruption in connection with the Panama canal and especially the charges affecting public officials, members of the Chamber and others connected with the public service. The commission is to be named to-morrow, and will begin the enquiry forthwith. It is rumored that gigantic scandals will be unearthed and that other suicides may be looked for besides that of Baron de Reinach, who was one of the men involved in the alleged scandals. The Baron left an immense fortune of about 300,000 francs, much of it accumulated in connection with Panama canal enterprises. There is great excitement in Paris and there are scenes in the Chamber of Deputies. The enquiry is the leading subject of discussion everywhere. The police are said to be keeping a quiet surveillance over several wealthy men mentioned in connection with the Panama frauds, and who are suspected of a desire to leave France, in order to escape prosecution.

ADVICE WANTED.

TO THE EDITOR:—I am in a difficulty of a domestic nature, and as I see your columns are always open to enquirers, I will tell you about it, in the hope that you or one of your numerous readers may be able to help me. Having heard a good deal, and seen a good deal too, of the dangers of vaccination, I did not have my boy vaccinated during the late epidemic. In consequence he is now denied admission to the schools, and the education which is his right.

Now if I could see that vaccination prevented smallpox, or be reasonably assured of the safety of the operation, I would have no objection to permit it, but I have never been able to get any satisfactory proof that it did any good, while as to its safety all I have to rely upon is the unsupported evidence of certain medical men. And here is my difficulty. Are these medical men worthy of such belief that I may safely stake the future health and happiness of my boy upon their statements? It seems not?

One example is worth a pound of argument. Here we have Dr. Milne (and other doctors) writing that Dr. Davie has frequently said the thing that is not, while Dr. Davie bluntly asserts that Dr. Milne et al. make "statements which are absolutely untrue." Both cannot be right. I will not presume to arbitrate, or to say which tells the taradiddles; as Dr. Milne's ipse dixit is just as good as Dr. Davie's it may be left an open question. But I will say that the public is rather fresher than I take it for, if it does not come to the same conclusion that I have, viz: That when the two most prominent officials here are unable to agree upon the most simple facts within their own knowledge, their unanimity upon the question of vaccination is suspicious, and goes to show that they know nothing about it, or they would disagree on that too.

Dr. A. and Dr. B. accuse each other of telling untruths, but both unite in calling Mr. C. an idiot, who must be coerced. In the meantime C. (the anti-vaccinator) lays low, knowing that by their miserable squabbles the doctors are doing more good to the cause he has most at heart than any efforts of his can accomplish. And he is right.

A DISGUSTED CITIZEN.

SMALLPOX.

TO THE EDITOR:—Don't you think it is time that the doctors took a lesson in a little common every day sense, and told the people the truth about smallpox and vaccination matters. The public generally should be told that smallpox is nothing more nor less than simply a dirt disease, not but what clean people will catch it, but they of necessity must catch it from those who are not clean in their person or their surroundings. Such being the case, one cannot vaccinate successfully against dirt. Of course vaccination dirt may have some influence on smallpox dirt—excuse me for calling things by their proper names—simply as one poison acting on another.

In China they take the bull by the horns and inoculate, not on the arm but up the nose, nature's place for catching smallpox. Now the meaning of this is simply the Chinese, knowing the dirty nature of their own people, inoculate the child while it is well, so that the poison may have a subject in good condition to work upon, knowing full well that no Chinaman can escape catching smallpox. In China the uncleanness of the people makes the country a hotbed for all classes of disease. The majority of the people of this province are clean people, which accounts more for smallpox having died out than any other cause. But to strike the root of the evil let us have compulsory cleanliness, let the children be examined at the schools, not for vaccination marks, but for marks of ample soap and pure water. I have no hatred against the medical man. A conscientious doctor is at all times one of the noblest of men. But with the advent of issuing certificates for marks of cleanliness and not scars of vaccination, will we rid ourselves of smallpox and scarlet fever, and all other fevers and diseases will be reduced to a minimum and doctors bills too. It is not wise for us as a community to go back to 1798, but progress and forward is the watch cry of yours,

The Advertising

Of Hood's Sarsaparilla is always within the bounds of reason because it is true; it always appeals to the sober, common sense of thinking people because it is true; and it is always fully substantiated by endorsements, which in the financial world would be accepted without a moment's hesitation.

For a general family cathartic we confidently recommend Hood's Pills.

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

The Duff Opera Company.

The musical event of the season is the visit of the Duff opera company to Victoria next Monday and Tuesday evenings. This excellent organization has won the unqualified praise of the American critics and comes here from a long series of successful engagements all over the States. The company is a strong one, and possesses leaders of renown, whose voices have delighted the finest audiences of the east. The repertoire of the company is extensive and includes many of the latest successes. Among them might be mentioned "Cavalleria Rusticana," the work which enabled young Signor P. Mascagni to awake one morning and find himself famous, and which created such a furore in London and New York. "The Gondoliers," the latest Gilbert-Sullivan success. "Miss Helyett" the clever skit upon the Quakers. "A Trip to Africa," Suppe's enjoyable opera, "Trial by Jury," etc., etc. Of these the pieces to be presented here are: "Monday night, "Trial by Jury" and "Cavalleria Rusticana"; Tuesday night, "A Trip to Africa." The music of "Cavalleria Rusticana," is by Pietro Mascagni, an Italian boy of 23. It is of the advanced school of his native land, with Wagnerian touches of singular grandeur. Its superb melodies are original and indescribably beautiful. Its instrumentation is something marvelous. Nothing like it has been heard in years. It is refreshingly new and delightful, and has excited the wonder and envy of thousands of musicians all over the world. The orchestra is all that could be desired. The intoxicating music of Mascagni's great work is half indebted to the matchless orchestration for its beauty.

THE QUARANTINE STATION.

Advices from Ottawa say that the Dominion Government has instructed the Engineer to prepare plans for a deep water wharf and proper buildings for quarantine purposes at either Albert Head or William's Head. The location of the station does not appear to be definitely decided upon, so what with settling this question and considering plans, a good long time will be likely to elapse before this coast is provided with effective quarantine appliances and methods. It would be too much to expect the Ottawa Government to hasten its movements in the slightest when a work of pressing necessity such as this is in contemplation. Only public utility is involved in this; there is no prospect of party advantage being gained. Much greater speed would be shown in the construction of some canal or harbor works or public building calculated to influence the vote of some doubtful eastern constituency. We need not expect to see a properly equipped quarantine station here before some two years at least have gone by. In the meantime we can only hope that ships coming from the Orient will by happy accident bring no plague with them, for if they do come laden with any infectious disorders we can place very little dependence on our quarantine protection.

THE POPULAR WILL.

That remarkable feature in the Colonist's mental outfit which prevents it from dealing honestly with another's arguments is again very much in evidence this morning. Here is a peculiar outburst: "Our contemporary, the TIMES, has been making a feeble attempt to controvert our argument, that the English people have more direct and immediate power over their own governments than the people of the great republic to the south of us have over theirs." The TIMES made no such attempt, "feeble" or otherwise. Then, again, it is asserted, that the TIMES "finds support in an article written by Lord Salisbury, in which he says: 'Should Mr. Gladstone create peers to procure the Home Rule bill through the Lords, Lord Salisbury will not acknowledge them.'" It is not clear whether the Colonist wishes to credit the quoted assertion to the TIMES or to Lord Salisbury, but it is quite certain that neither the one nor the other is stupid enough to regard the Conservative leader as constituting the whole House of Lords. We can say most positively, at all events, that no such sentence appeared in the TIMES. What we did say was that Lord Salisbury, speaking for the Conservatives, has coolly announced that the House of Lords will undertake to balk the plainly expressed will of the people by rejecting any Home Rule bill sent up from the Commons. He further says that the House of Lords will prevent the Gladstone Government from overcoming its opposition by creating new peers, the plan being simply to refuse such new peers admission. If Lord Salisbury is right in his contentions, and the House of Lords succeeds in blocking Home Rule legislation, for which the electors have declared, the plain conclusion is that the British constitution does not provide for immediate enforcement of the people's will quite so effectively as the Colonist's former article implied. But the Colonist says Lord Salisbury is wrong, and that "he and his House are no match for the House of Commons." It is as satisfactory as it is unusual to see our Conservative neighbor thus setting his Lordship right; but we beg leave to state that its citations from history do not materially improve its position. The House of Commons can coerce the House of Lords, it says, by refusing to vote supplies. What a spectacle this would be, of the people's representatives being obliged to throw the whole political machinery of the country out of order so that the will of the people might be enforced! We cannot see that this would lessen the force of our assertion that a change of public opinion in Great Britain may not be given effect so promptly as the Colonist formerly represented. Our neighbor seems to argue further that the House of Commons might prevail by tacking the Home Rule bill on to the supply bill, or by refusing to renew the Mutiny Act. There is no need to notice this argument except as a remarkable evidence of the Colonist's ignorance of British Parliamentary methods. As to the constitution of the United States, the TIMES is quite ready to admit that it has too much rigidity and that popular opinion is not promptly enough reflected in the government. But that is not to say, as the Colonist said, that the British system, with its obstructive House of Lords, is quite free from similar anomalies.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The St. John, N.B., News, an Independent-Conservative paper, talks thus for the benefit of the Government:—"True, the Conservative party is comparatively stronger to-day in Canada than it has been since the late Sir John swept the Dominion in 1878; but there are special causes to account for this; and if the Government assumes that the electorate are with them heart and soul in their lavish expenditures of the public funds, they are simply hugging a delusion to their souls and they will have a rude awakening in the not distant future."

The Toronto Evening Star, a paper lately established under circumstances which should make it peculiarly representative of the workingmen, speaks very pronouncedly against the present fiscal policy of Canada. In a recent issue it says:—

What has protection done for the Dominion? The great consideration in a country like Canada is population, and when population has been secured beneficial industries will follow. The protectionist touters reverse this They argue that the people should gather all their available funds and go out into the highways and byways offering rewards for manufacturers to come and live upon them, and that population will follow. Experience belies this reasoning. The Government has tried the experiment of billeting the manufacturer upon the people, but instead of a rush of population coming at the heels of the manufacturer, there has been no gain in that direction whatever.

Canada, with its wealth of land and forest, its great fisheries and rich mines, the most splendid attractions any country can offer to settlers, has, under a high protective tariff which was heralded as the great promoter of population, secured half a million addition to its people in ten years by natural increase.

The Star would apply a radical remedy for Canada's want of progress, as follows:—

Free Trade with whatever country will give Canada Free Trade would alter this. Such a policy would immediately open Canada to British exports. The shipping trade would improve. Sending more to us, Great Britain would take more from us. The people would be able to purchase in the cheapest market. They would get cheaply and free from tariff taxes articles which are not produced here. Merchants could import more and sell cheaper, and would attract customers from the United States. Canada would become the distributor for the continent, and, having these advantages population would follow. Imperial Federation if it favors federation on a trade basis is good, if on any other basis it would be repudiated. Preferential tariff the British will never give, and it is idle to look for it. Free Trade with Great Britain, and the States if it will, would be a remedy for the evils which Protection and Canada's defective banking and monetary system generally have wrought, and the Dominion will never be happy until it gets it.

PREVENTION BETTER THAN CURE.

TO THE EDITOR:—Of the many astonishing statements I have heard or read since "the dread disease" made its appearance in our midst, the most surprising has been Dr. Davie's: that although smallpox can be prevented there are no means of preventing diphtheria and scarlet fever. And yet Dr. Davie gets mad when a brother practitioner accuses him of being wanting in the knowledge of sanitary science. It is usually supposed to be the A.B.C. of the science that if it could be so ordered that the people of any city should live absolutely cleanly lives, in perfect houses, with a perfect sewerage system, and pure air and sunshine, no one ought to die at all except from old age, and that the nearer they can get to these conditions the healthier the city will be. All experience teaches this and it is well exemplified by the steady decrease in the death rate wherever an attempt is made to realize the theory. This is one of the most encouraging returns the people of any city have for the sometimes lavish expenditure of public money in opening up parks, and other breathing spaces, and laying down an extensive sewerage system. Dr. Davie's statement really savors of the last century, when all diseases were supposed to be visitations from God, and when all energies were directed towards their alleviation or cure, and none towards their prevention. If our friend had practiced forty years ago he would, doubtless have asserted that typhus fever could not be prevented, yet has it not been practically annihilated by sanitation, and purer air and better food for the poorer classes, amongst whom, like smallpox, it chiefly raged. There is absolutely no other reason that can be given for the disappearance of typhus. It is now universally admitted that wherever the sanitary condition is bad, there will be found typhoid and scarlet fevers, diphtheria and the other zymotic diseases, so that any doctor who refuses to admit it simply exposes the fact that he is behind the age and requires to study the subject. It would be interesting to know from Dr. Davie what will prevent smallpox. If he answers, vaccination, I would mildly enquire: Then why does it not prevent? Not to go further than our own door, we find on the authority of figures furnished by Dr. Richardson (these are widely doubted, but take them as correct) that out of 94 cases at the Jubilee Hospital 54 were vaccinated, and that these people had every variety of the disease even to black smallpox. One of the worst features of the practice of vaccination is that, even granting it has some virtues, it induces a false security. People feeling that they are protected, neglect cleaning up their backyards and streets and alleys, only to find that after all the smallpox comes, and that, like the rain, it falls on the vaccinated and the unvaccinated alike. And if vaccination is really a preventive why not rely upon it wholly; why dislocate the entire trade of the country, and make Victoria a bye-word and a place to be avoided, with its quarantine and suspect stations, isolation and compulsory vaccination? This city has had a blow that it will not recover from for years, and all because of a scare worked up over a disease which, quoting Dr. Davie again, is not nearly so deadly as diphtheria or scarlet fever. No fuss is made over the two last, why make so much fuss over the former? Because no means of preventing the latter are known (to Dr. Davie), while there is an infallible preventive of the former—an "infallible" preventive that breaks down at every turn.

These questions are voted a great bore by most people, who can scarcely be got to read anything about them. They are nevertheless questions of the utmost importance to the community, and this must be my excuse for writing at such length.

COMMON SENSE.

REV. MR. WATSON'S OPINION.

He Says the Local Newspapers Are Afraid to Oppose the Liquor Dealers.

In the Pandora Avenue Methodist church Sunday morning, Rev. C. Watson, during his sermon, referred to the reporters of the daily papers who attended the proceedings of the Royal Commission on the liquor traffic. He said he noticed that when a servant of God was giving his evidence the reporters sometimes leaned back in their chairs and did not take a note, whereas they worked hard when witnesses on the liquor side were giving their evidence.

Rev. Mr. Watson was asked to-day if he did not consider that the reporters had given a good report of what he, Rev. Dr. Campbell, Sheriff McMillan, Postmaster Shakespeare and other prohibition witnesses said.

Rev. Mr. Watson replied that when he mentioned the matter he was referring to the reporters' action when Dr. Lewis Hall was giving his evidence. Dr. Hall's evidence was of vital importance, but the reporters did not take it down.

"I mentioned the matter to show," said Mr. Watson, "how the liquor men dominate. Why, it is well known that the local papers are afraid to oppose the liquor men, and they do very little to assist the temperance cause."

ARRIVAL OF THE CHINA.

A Quiet Trip From the Orient—More Sealers Return.

The steamship Empress of China, Capt. R. Archibald, arrived this morning, 11 days from Yokohama. She brought a fair list of cabin passengers, 225 Chinese for Victoria and about 25 Japanese. She had a good cargo of freight. Her voyage was uneventful, and nothing of special importance is reported from the Orient.

The following is the list of passengers:

First Saloon—Mr. Adams, Miss Brooks, Mr. Codman, Mr. Crisp, Mr. and Mrs. J. Douglass, Mr. A. M. A. Evans, Frau Von Faliot, son and two daughters, Mr. and Mrs. D. Galbraith, Mrs. Gillman, Mr. Orlando Harley, Mr. F. E. Hughes, Mr. Higginbotham, Mr. Leaf, Mr. L. Millward, Mr. B. K. Miller, jr., Mr. Moffatt, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. McAlpine and two children, Mr. J. Newcome, Mr. Noucher, Mr. Hy. D. Pierce, Master Douglas Pierce, Mrs. D'Arcy Paul, Mrs. Randolph, Miss Riley, Mr. Richardson, Mr. W. W. Rockhill, Miss Scidmore, Mr. Sargent, Mr. A. J. Souza, Mr. Taft, Mr. P. K. Thompson, Mr. G. Turner.

Second Saloon—Mrs. Bond and two children, Mr. C. Fukata, Mr. M. Jasperson, Mr. Michaelofski, Mr. Tomita.

Messrs. P. R. Thompson and G. Turner, who have had some contracts in Japan, are among the passengers.

Four sealers off the Carmolite, seized by the Russians, were among the passengers. They are Englishmen born and the consul at Nagaska decided to send them to England and not to British Columbia along with the rest of the crew, who were all Canadians. He accordingly sent them to Hong Kong, where the consul general arranged for sending them home to Victoria. The action of the vice consul is laughed at in official circles here. The four men are ordinary seamen. They were paid off and discharged this afternoon.

STORMS IN THE NORTH.

Continuous Gales do a Great Deal of Damage on the Skeena and the Northern Coast.

Miners and Surveyors Leaving the Wilderness for Civilization.

The people along the northern coast of the province have been experiencing some pretty rough weather. The steamer Danube, Captain Meyer, which arrived from the north this morning, had a very boisterous trip, and several times her two anchors had to be thrown over so that she would not be blown around by the gales.

On the Skeena river, strong westerly gales were blowing continuously for a week. The Royal Canadian Packing Company's mill, which is in an exposed position, suffered from the force of the wind. A boom of 500,000 feet of saw logs belonging to the company broke loose and the logs were scattered all over the river. A number of small steamers and boats were out gathering them up when the Danube left. The Royal Canadian Company's steamer Cariboo and Fly was lying at her wharf during the gales. The wind made it an impossibility to get her away from the wharf against which she was being blown. Her upper works were badly smashed, which will necessitate a delay of a couple of weeks for repairs.

At Queen Charlotte Island there were six inches of snow on the ground. This is the first time in many years that snow has fallen there so early in the season. Captain Meyer says it is a sign that strong northerly winds are to be encountered in the northern waters this winter.

A report came from the head waters of the Skeena that a surveying party had had trouble with the missionaries on account of the smallpox in the cities. The reports in regard to the smallpox had been greatly exaggerated.

The steamer Barbara Boscowitz was in the mud at Alert Bay when the Danube passed. She had gone on at low tide and would come off as soon as the tide rose.

The passengers from the north were: Geo. Williscroft, D. McDermot, Mr. McInnes, George Kenny, H. Burnett, J. Carrey, J. Allison, Mr. Smith, G. D. Curtis, Mr. Clifford, John Flewin, N. H. Mulkey, D. Boarde, W. Bryant, R. Brettle, R. Cunningham, W. B. Skellen, H. Hodges, P. Burke, R. McDonald, F. Crawley, J. Pardenny, T. H. Robinson, N. Gibbons, O. H. Beeler, A. L. Poudrier, F. Heckle, H. Wright, Mrs. Benton, J. Strauberg, J. Devereaux, S. A. Spencer, D. Thomson, J. Cooper, T. Howell, Wm. Wallace, J. Knox, E. Atkinson, A. Reeve, H. Caldwell, H. Berryman, D. Huson, W. Rudge and Hugh Grant. Her cargo consisted of 11,181 cases of salmon from Inverness, 11,195 from Balmoral, 114 barrels of oil, 55 barrels of salmon, 5 bales of fur and $10,000 of treasure.

DIDN'T FIND THE TREASURE.

W. H. Mulkey and O. H. Beeler, who went to Queen Charlotte Island in search of a lost ledge, have returned. Mr. Mulkey says they were unsuccessful as far as they went. He would have liked to have remained north a little longer, but if he had waited he would have remained all winter, which he could not do.

THE OMINECA COUNTRY.

George Kenny, the veteran Omineca miner, arrived from the north on the steamer Danube. He paid his last visit to Victoria two years ago. Since then he has been working on Lone creek, the latest diggings in the country. Fourteen white men, sixteen Chinamen and a number of Indians worked the creek this summer. Besides these several other miners were through the district prospecting. Nothing big was found by anyone, the miners simply making wages. The season was an unusually short one, there being four feet of snow on the level in May, when the miners went in. It began to fall again in September. There is but one white man wintering on Lone creek and one on Manson creek. All the others came out of the country. Some stopped at the canyon on the Skeena river, where the Dominion Government have commenced removing the rocks from the river.

GOVERNMENT SURVEYORS.

Mr. A. L. Poudrier, the Government surveyor, who has, with a party of nine men, been surveying the Buckley River district, returned home after an absence of six months. They surveyed 75,000 acres of land which Mr. Poudrier explored last year. There is good grazing land in the district and lots of game. The Indians talked as usual about preventing the surveyors from going into the country on account of smallpox in the city, "but," said Mr. Poudrier, "their resistance consists simply of talk."

Phœnix Lager Beer.

To-Morrow Evening's Concert.

The entertainment at the Victoria Theatre to-morrow evening under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., will undoubtedly draw together the most fashionable audience of the season. The quality of the performance is without question equal to anything ever attempted by local amusement makers, and cannot fail of success. As already stated there will be vocal and instrumental music by the best local talent. Military drill by 30 young ladies. Tableaux, scenic and classic, under the superintendence of experienced ladies. This entertainment will be honored by the presence of the Lieut.-Governor and Mrs. Dewdney, Admiral Hotham and officers of the fleet, Lieut.-Col. Holmes and officers of C. Battery, Mayor Beaven and the whole city council.

For Several Months.

From seven in the morning till closing time every day in the week, Lange & Co., have been selling their splendid stock of jewelry, etc., away below auction prices, and those who purchase from them are not obliged to compete with others for bargains, and can take their own time selecting what they want. A Captain Takes a Mate.

Miss Sophia Schnoter was married last night to Captain Alfred Bissett, of the sealing schooner Annie E. Paint. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Campbell at the residence of the bride's parents, 22 South Turner street. Miss C. Cameron was bridesmaid and Capt. Butler best man. The bride was attired in pongee silk and carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums.

Caused by the Rain.

The stone bulkhead at the end of the line of the sidewalk on the Government street side of the Adelphi building caved in early this morning. Aside from the destruction of the wall itself no serious damage was done. A gang of laborers was immediately put to work to clear the debris away, and the wall will be replaced as soon as possible. The rain is responsible for the accident.

Got Into Trouble.

The U. S. man-of-war Charleston and her master, H. L. Johnson, who ranks as commander in the navy, are in a little trouble. Early this season Johnson seized the whaler Jane Grey near the St. Paul islands on suspicion that she was taking seals. He sent the Grey to Sitka, where she was kept until discharged by the U. S. district attorney, there being absolutely nothing upon which to hold her. At Sitka part of her crew left her, and she returned to San Francisco without a whale. Her captain will claim damages and Commander Johnson's action will be investigated.

Capt. Jacobs Doing Well.

Captain Solomon Jacobs, formerly master and owner of the schooner Mollie Adams, now the E. B. Marvin, is in command of the new clipper-schooner Fredonia, one of the most beautiful vessels in the Gloucester fishing fleet. Capt. Sol. Jacobs was "high line" in the mackerel fleet and has made lots of money during the last year. Capt. Jacobs will be better remembered in Victoria as the defendant in the suit of Baxter vs. Jacobs, arising out of the breaking of a contract by Jacobs. The captain at the end of the trial spent several months in the debtor's cell at the provincial jail.

Reported Lost in the Forest.

The New Westminster correspondent of the Vancouver Telegram stated in last Friday's issue that Karl Braden, a young Englishman, who left Victoria last June to go prospecting in the Chilcotin country, had been lost in the forests of Squamish valley, with very little hope of his recovery. As Mr. Braden was very well known in this city, having practised his profession as an artist for some months, his studio being in the Five Sisters block, much anxiety is felt on his account. To a friend here Mr. Braden said that he would return from the north about Christmas, and that there need be no anxiety as to his whereabouts until after that date. He was accompanied by an engineer, who has had wide experience in traversing the pathless wilds of Chilcotin, and who professed to know the country thoroughly. Such being the case it is sincerely hoped by the many friends of Mr. Braden here that the reference to him in the Telegram is ill-founded. The little expedition was well fitted out, and both members of it were men eminently able to take care of themselves under any circumstances. Braden was a fine specimen of manhood; tall, compactly built and possessed of great powers of endurance, unusual activity and plenty of the bulldog pluck and tenacity characteristic of the English race. With these qualifications it will be seen that Mr. Braden is not exactly the sort of man to give up hope very easily. Any news of the little party will be awaited with impatience by all who knew him here.

DISCUSSING THE CANON.

No Steps Yet Taken for the Election of Bishop Hills' Successor.

The Synod of the Diocese of Columbia met in the Cathedral Sunday school room this morning to elect a successor to Bishop Hills. There were twenty clergymen and 45 laymen present. The synod decided not to admit members of the press.

The canon calling the meeting was discussed, it being contended by some of the members that the meeting was not legal, as it was called before Bishop Hills' resignation was accepted. The discussion lasted all day, the general opinion being that the meeting should adjourn and another be called during Easter for the election of a bishop.

Penketh, paid an official visit, and exemplified the workings of the order. The auditors are now preparing the report showing the financial standing of the lodge. Bro. S. E. B. King, president of Ottaway lodge, was present.

This fall has been rather wetter than usual, but still a good deal of ploughing has been done. Lequimes have the foundation laid for their new mill. It is on the old site and will be ready for work in two months. Two houses are to be put up at Kelowna shortly. The mill burning down has kept building back here.

IMPERIAL FEDERATION.

The Advantages of a Proper System of Directing Emigration to the Colonies.

Canada's High Tariff Policy an Obstacle in the Way of Improvement.

I was somewhat astonished the other day on reading an editorial in the Colonist upon the defeat of the Republican party in the United States to see it stated therein that the prosperity of any country is not due to the policy of the Government but to natural causes. I have nothing to say concerning this view of the subject except that if I am not mistaken it is diametrically opposed to the arguments used by the upholders of the National Policy in Canada. Whether protection has or has not been a blessing to the people of Canada is not a question for me to discuss here, but its bearing on immigration comes within my province.

There is no doubt in my mind that the increased cost of living to the people of this country, especially the farmers, during the years of protection has had a retarding influence upon emigration from Great Britain to Canada. I speak from experience. One of the first questions asked by an intending emigrant in the old country is the cost of living in the new land, and the chief objection to Canada which the emigration agent in Great Britain is called upon to overcome is on that one point. To be truthful he must admit that the expense of living in Canada is higher than it is in England. To offset this admission he of course dwells on the fact that land is plentiful and cheap, wages generally good and the prospect of independence more certain in Canada than in the old country. Yet the impression sticks that the cost of living is high in Canada and it has a deterrent influence on emigration to this country.

There has been no lack of effort on the part of agents in distributing information regarding Canada throughout Great Britain. Millions of copies of descriptive pamphlets have been circulated, lectures delivered, and other means taken to diffuse information about the Dominion amongst the people of the British Isles, yet so far we have been able to secure only a small portion of the surplus population of Great Britain as settlers in Canada. There is a screw loose somewhere, I may say there are several screws in that condition, but space forbids my enumerating them here, although I may be able to do so on some subsequent occasion. One thing that is wanted before emigration to the colonies can attain any large proportion is the co-operation of the mother country in that direction. And why should not Great Britain assist in the work?

Take the case of Germany, which has furnished several millions of settlers to the United States. Of late years the German Government, finding that the surplus population of the empire was drifting to foreign countries where it ceased to be of any benefit to the mother land, has given more attention to acquiring colonies and promoting colonization under the German flag. It seems to me that Great Britain has even more reason to promote colonization than Germany. With a limited area in proportion to the number of its people and a surplus population growing each year larger, the necessity for emigration cannot be denied and its adoption as a means of relief by the Imperial Government is only a question of time. The sooner it is adopted the better it will be for Great Britain. But when adopted where will the flow of emigration be directed to? To foreign lands or to the colonies? Surely the latter.

The existing colonies of Great Britain cannot be expected to bear all the burden and expense of so great a work. They have to receive and care for the immigrants on arrival—to find land upon which they may settle, and to open up roads, construct railways, and otherwise develope the country so that the settlers may be prosperous in their new homes. But there is more to be done than this in guiding the stream of emigration. Ways and means for the transport of the emigrants and to give them a start in their new life have to be provided and in this the Imperial Government could play an important part. Could the adoption of a system of emigration directed to the colonies as part of its programme be defended by a British Government? Why not?

The congested state of the country, the continued increase of its population and the decrease in the demand abroad for British manufactures is making the problem of providing means of livelihood for the people in Great Britain more and more difficult to solve. The only solution that I can see, if at the same time the power, influence and integrity of the British empire is to be preserved, is to people the colonies with British settlers, in order to relieve the congested state of Great Britain and to open colonial markets to British manufacturers, so as to give employment to the workshops of Great Britain. If this is a true solution of the problem, has not Great Britain an equal interest with the colonies in having it carried out?

But what encouragement has there been to Great Britain, especially on the part of Canada, to take part in the promotion of emigration? She finds that in this, one of her greatest colonies, her manufactures are almost excluded by a high tariff. She might just as well promote emigration to the United States or any other foreign country as to Canada, so far as any hope therefrom of enlarging her trade or increasing the demand for her manufactures. I doubt if under such circumstances state-aided emigration from Great Britain could be defended, because each emigrant thus sent out of the country would cease to be a consumer of British goods, and would to that extent be another nail in the coffin of British industry.

There can be no doubt that the latter has suffered greatly through the doors of foreign markets being closed against her manufactures, but I cannot see, situated as she is, how Great Britain would be benefitted by adopting a policy of protection. Rather should she cultivate the settlement and development of her colonies, and in return the colonists should leave their ports open for the free admission of British goods. In this way I believe the Empire as a whole, Mother Country and colonies, would be benefitted.

The colonies want their lands settled upon and tilled, their pastures covered with cattle, their forests, their mines and other resources developed, and in order to do this they require people and capital. The mother country wants food, raw material and many of the articles manufactured in the colonies, and she has the people and the money to spare to assist the colonies in their development. Imperial colonization is, therefore, in my opinion, more calculated to preserve the empire and increase its wealth, power and influence than the scheme of Imperial Federation in the light in which it is at present regarded by some.

Look at the vast area of fertile land in Canada requiring settlers in order to produce great crops of grain and vast herds of cattle. Look at her mines, her forests and other resources lying idle because of the lack of people and capital to develop them. Is it a wise policy then for our Government to antagonize the mother country where the people and the money can be procured? That we have done this to a certain extent by our tariff against British goods is a fact which can hardly be denied.

Would not our High Commissioner be doing better service to Canada if he were to set himself to work to bring about, if possible, a better arrangement for the interchange of commodities between the mother country and Canada than by indulging in dreams of Imperial Federation and advocating preferential duties on the part of Great Britain?

That Imperial Federation in the light it is now regarded by many of its admirers, is but a dream never to be realized I believe, I have endeavored to point out the difficulties in the way of colonial representation at Westminster, and the latest idea of the federation committee to form an imperial council in London, if carried out, would only result in a sort of advisory board having no authority or power to act. It is not likely that the parliaments of Great Britain or the colonies would agree to delegate to a few men sitting in council in London the power to decide the destinies of the empire. Such an Imperial Council, however, could do much good and the recommendation of the committee in favor of its formation only shows that I was not far wrong when I said that if the agents-general of the colonies in London would work together in harmony for the common good of the empire, the results would be beneficial. The material for the formation of an Imperial Council is right there in London to-day. Why is it not formed? Probably Sir Charles Tupper, our High Commissioner, could answer this question if he chose, or or perhaps some of the agents-general for the colonies could answer it for him.

Thanking you for the space you have so kindly given me in your valuable journal, I am, yours truly,

ENGLISH PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Sketch of Eton College, Which Has Been Nursed by Royalty For Centuries.

Venerable Buildings and Winsome Environments—Flogging Still in Vogue.

Special Correspondence of the TIMES.]

ETON, England, Nov. 7.—Eton, in many respects the greatest of the endowed schools of England, has always basked in the sunshine of royalty. Literally and figuratively the sun has always shone upon it from the direction of Windsor. Literally and figuratively, too, the eyes of the sovereign are always upon it.

If you come by rail from London to Eton you must of necessity pass through the royal borough of Windsor, for at Windsor is the terminus of the little branch line over which roll the stately coaches of the Queen. You will of course visit Windsor Castle. From its towers and terraces the most remarkable object in all the landscape is Eton College. The castle is a short distance from the south bank of the Thames, and the college is about the same distance from the northern bank.

Around Windsor Castle huddles a compact though slovenly old town. Crowding close to Eton College is a lesser though pleasanter collection of narrow windowed shops, snug and often picturesque boarding or "dames'" houses where the youngsters of Eton dwell; decayed hostelries and tiny homes of those who in time come to subsist upon the meager though permanent gainings of an ancient and decorous college town. The Thames, here a beautiful, pellucid and almost languorous stream, winds in and out and on between, separating Buckinghamshire and its olden college town from Berkshire and its world famous royal demesne.

The chief thoroughfare of Windsor winds from east to west around the southern walls of the castle, at its southwestern angle, just beyond the Henry VIII Gateway, merges into High street, and this, abruptly descending under the famous Cæsar's Tower, becomes Thames street. The latter, shadowed by the castle walls on the east and huddled shops on the west, leads to a bridge across the Thames.

When you have idled here for a time among the crowds of gay boatmen thronging the bridge and river banks above and below and set your face toward the college, you are upon the one long straggling street which Eton possesses. This, now and then entered by pretty courts and lanes, extends no more than a half mile, when it breaks into two beautiful country roads—the one winding to the west to Bray, where dwelt the vicar of chamelon fame, and the other to Slough, where Herschel lived, and thence on to Stoke Poges, where sang and lies buried the author of the "Elegy."

Just where these roads diverge, beneath noble elms, where ivy and creepers almost cover every ancient wall, are clustered the chief buildings, various offices and principal masters' houses of Eton College. Divested entirely of its scholastic associations it is as pleasant and restful a spot as one can find in England.

Along both sides of the highway, which here runs northeasterly toward Slough and back northwesterly toward Windsor, close up to the street line are massed the quaintest of strange old structures. From time to time most of these have been added to the original college buildings, or some building devoted to other purposes has been in a way transformed for school uses until the charming and curious spectacle is presented of a town's chief thoroughfare, retaining many of its old time town aspects, forming something like a busy yet reposeful and shaded way through an idly planned and vagariously disposed though always picturesque college retreat.

The original college buildings are all to the east of this highway. Opposite are the score or more which have been built or acquired. If you should stand immediately in front of the former by the worn archway through which for more than four and a half centuries have passed in and out stately Collegers with flowing gowns and flippant Oppidans without, as far as you could see toward Windsor and up the gentle turnings of the diverging highways, every ancient building has its use for Eton school, Eton master or officer, Eton printing, Eton books, or some other sort of occupancy necessary to the conduct of Eton College affairs.

The antiquity of the school is very great. The pious Henry VI was its founder. Some material token of his affection for the Holy Church must be made. Evidently his idea was to emulate the example of William of Wykeham, who established the first endowed school of this class at royal Winchester, and New School at Oxford, to receive its graduates. So Henry made Eton the preparatory school of the secular King's College in the University of Cambridge, to which scholars are elected from Eton. The site was undoubtedly selected so that the institution might be under the immediate eye of Henry. A dreary, flat and lonely spot it must have been in olden days. The King did not even own it. It was entirely outside the royal demesne of Windsor. He was compelled to purchase the perpetual advowson of the parish church of Eton and many tracts of land in the shires of Bucks and Berks, and some of the estates still held by Eton College were taken from such ancient abbeys as Fecamp, Fontenoy, Yvry and St. Stephen's at Caen.

Though the college was founded in 1440 solemn admission was not given to the provost, fellows, clerks and scholars until December, 1443. The enactments for Eton were almost a literal transcript of those at Winchester. Its incorporated name was "The King's College of our Lady of Eton beside Windsor," and its original foundation provided for a provost, ten fellows, four clerks, six choristers, a schoolmaster, twenty-five poor and indigent scholars and twenty-five poor and infirm men, who were "to pray for the king."

Aside from the official governing body the actual school officers of Eton now comprise a crown appointed provost, a similar official to our "principal" or "president," who must be a master of arts and a member of the Church of England (not necessarily in orders) over thirty years of age, ten "fellows," who are members of the governing body, a vice provost, bursars, secretaries or clerks, an auditor, a head master, a lower master, about thirty assistant masters, and "conducts" or chaplains.

All ordinary discipline may be said to emanate from the "houses," where boys not on the foundation reside, whose masters are directly responsible to the head and lower masters for the good conduct of those in charge; to the "captains" of the "houses," who are selected from among the scholars in the houses to assist in keeping order, and, secondarily, both from "fagmasters" over their respective deputized "fags," and through the general supervision by all upper forms or divisions of the school over all members of the successive grades below them. It is an odd system to us Americans, but it is a good one here, because its results are good.

The seventy free or foundation scholars are called "Collegers." Formerly they wore the black cloth gown to distinguish them, but this badge of poverty was some time since removed. The foundation scholarships are open to all boys—British subjects—between the ages of twelve and fourteen, and are only tenable to the completion of the nineteenth year. These Collegers are educated and maintained during school term or time out of the funds of the college. At the beginning of the century the Collegers' routine and fare were far from enviable. They dined most meagerly at 12 o'clock every day, and supped at 6 on whole school days and at 5 on other days. They assembled in the Hall at 7 every night, and sat there reading for an hour under the care of their captain. At 8 they proceeded to the Lower School, where they recited the prayers, which used in still earlier times to be said in the Long Chamber. They were then locked up for the night. On Sunday morning they went to the Upper School to sing the 100th Psalm, and to join in prayers read by the Fifth Form Præposter. Collegers and Oppidans alike went to church at 10 o'clock on Sundays, and they all had to sit in the Upper School between 2 and 3 while a member of the Fifth Form read aloud several pages of that exciting essay, "The Whole Duty of Man."

The dinner consisted invariably of mutton, potatoes, bread and beer, with the addition of pudding on Sundays. As a matter of fact almost every Colleger hired a room in the town in which to get his breakfast and tea, which the college did not furnish, and in which to prepare his lessons. This rendered his expenses nearly equal to those not on the foundation, and an old Etonian vehemently states that boys unable to incur these unjust expenses underwent "privations that might have broken down a cabin boy, and would be thought inhuman if inflicted on a galley slave." An ode on a "Nearer Prospect of Eton," after Gray, written in 1798, was virile with satire on this order of things and hastened reformation. The quality of the beer was thus alluded to:

> Pint after pint you drink in vain;
> Still sober, you may drink again.
> You can't get drunk in Hall!

Everything is now different. Good food is supplied for the hall. Breakfast and tea are furnished at trifling cost. Servants lessen the imposition of "fagging." An assistant master and a matron have domestic superintendence. Long Chamber of old, famous for its fifty-two beds, filth and frolics, has been practically abolished and a new building with separate rooms provided, chiefly by subscription from old Etonians. All badges of inferiority have been done away with. To be indigent and a pauper is no longer necessary to eligibility, and some of the best families of England are glad to have their sons become foundationers.

The "Oppidans" are all Eton boys not free scholars or "Collegers." There is no bar to any boy entering Eton as soon as he can read, and some have been received as young as seven years. The Eton system provides that from the moment he enters until he leaves for good he shall be under the immediate control, so far as his intellectual guidance is concerned, of a tutor who stands to him, while at Eton, in the entire relation of parent or guardian. There is now perhaps an average attendance of 1,000 boys. Fully 800 are nonresidents. All of these live in boarding houses, formerly conducted by women or "dames," and while now all but one are under the supervision of boarding masters, who each care for from thirty to fifty youths, they are still known as "dames' houses." These boarding masters are assistant masters of and teachers in the college. So far as college life and discipline are concerned all of these houses are as strictly subject to college law and regulation as though they were set down and securely locked within either of the two college quadrangles.

The principal and original buildings form two huge quadrangles. The first, entered from the highway through a much battered archway, is adorned by a central statue of the royal founder in bronze. This square, called the "School Yard," is inclosed by the chapel, schools, dormitories, masters' chambers, clock tower and "election chamber," where the highest gifts of the college, the scholarships in King's College, Cambridge, are annually bestowed.

The lesser quadrangle, nearest the Thames, which Eton college properly faces, comprises the cloisters in which are the residences of the provost and fellows, and the library, which is reached by a flight of steps to the left of the entrance of the cloisters. Beyond the cloisters are the fine college gardens, and still beyond these, through a small postern gate luxuriously mantled with ivy and "Weston's Yard," you come upon the "Playing Fields," where on holiday evenings, in what is called "Poets' Walk," the cricketers are wont to take their tea. These "Playing Fields," dearest of all things at Eton to all Etonians past and present, comprise an extensive tract of ground, intersected by a pretty stream running into the Thames and crossed by a small bridge. They are covered with rich verdure and shaded by venerable elms, the Thames calmly rippling along their banks, and Windsor Castle towering in the distance.

The chapel is a noble structure. Here, in the silent memorials to those who have rendered the old school famous by their own subsequent greatness; in the Upper School, adorned with its marble busts of Etonian worthies who became England's greatest statesmen, divines, philosophers and poets, and in the host of noted names carved everywhere upon the ancient woodwork by erst boyish hands, one finds the real answer to all impulse of criticism upon what seems at first to an American a dead age system of education of the British youth of today. Two flogging blocks have been in past times triumphantly borne away, but another stands in their place. It was not so long ago that the famous Dr. Keate (1809-34) flogged eighty boys in one night, thus quelling an incipient rebellion. That "odious system of fagging" still remains. If your boy or mine or the boy of the proudest earl of England enters Eton, there is no power to prevent him from doing the most menial drudgery for the fifth and sixth form lads. He is their slave until he himself reaches the fagmaster's estate.

It is a wonderful leveler. Gladstone, Lord Randolph Churchill, Chief Justice Coleridge, Lord Chatham, Lord Shelburne, Canning, Pusey, Bolingbroke, Pitt, Sir Humphrey Gilbert, Horace Walpole, Fielding, Hallam, and the poets Waller, Anstey, Shelley, Broome, Praed and Gray were all in their time fags at Eton—carrying the beer, cleaning the boots, grilling the herring, smudging the toast and dodging the bootjacks of their fagmasters above them. The Eton system, in brief, makes boys know how to endure and to rule. Behind all—an imperial scourge to ambitious effort—are imperishable memorials of those dead and living hosts who have made it a noble honor to have merely once been an Eton boy.

The British Wheat Crop of 1892.

Sir J. B. Lawes, says the Pall Mall Gazette, "does not give a very favorable account of the wheat crop of the past harvest. Last year his estimate of the average yield of the country at large was 30 bushels per acre, whereas this year he places the return at less than 26 bushels. The total yield he reckons at 7,423,000 quarters, and, deducting from this two bushels per acre for seed, there would remain available for consumption 6,849,000 quarters. As the total required by the country for consumption is reckoned at 23,750,000 quarters, nearly 22,000,000 quarters must be provided from stocks and imports. Assuming that over the whole country the yield only reaches to 24 bushels, the amount required from stocks and imports would be 23,000,000 quarters. Last year the quantity required to be provided from stocks and imports to meet the consumption of the harvest year was about 20,000,000 quarters, but the actual net imports within the period amounted to nearly 23,000,000 quarters. It is admitted that at the end of the past harvest year the stocks of foreign wheat in hand were very unusually large, while those of the home crop of 1891 were also large. With such an excess of supply over the requirements for consumption there can be little surprise, Sir J. B. Lawes, says, at the very low prices prevailing, nor can there be much doubt that whether the requirement for the current harvest year be 22,000,000 or 23,000,000 quarters beyond that supply by the home crop, the accumulated stock and further imports will prove adequate for our wants."

Writers of Famous Hymns.

It seems a singular fact that apparently nothing in a literary way will relegate a writer to oblivion so surely as to be the author of a world-famous hymn.

Take a few instances.

Nearly every one has heard or sung the line of "Shall We Gather at the River?" and yet how many know even the name of the author, much less the fact that he is living?

The writer is the Rev. Robert Lowry, D.D., a resident of Plainfield, N.J.

In Richmond, Ill., lives Dr. S. Fillmore Bennett. To how many is that name familiar, yet to whom is his familiar church song, "The Sweet By and By," not known?

In the interior of New York State lives Mrs. Annie Sherwood Hawkes, who wrote those famed lines of "I Need Thee Every Hour."

Hardly known and never recognized on the streets of New York as she walks out is Fannie Crosby, the author of countless hymns, among them the famous one, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

It is odd that the veil of obscurity should seem to be the inevitable reward of those whose pens have given us the hymns which have brought consolation and joy to so many thousands.—Boston Globe.

Recipe for Scandal.

The following is said by those who claim to know to be a first-class recipe for the manufacture of a pure article of scandal: Take a grain of falsehood, a handful of run-about, the same quantity of nimble tongue, a sprig of the herb backbite, a spoonful of don't you tell it, six drops of malice, a few drams of envy; add a little discontent and jealousy, and strain through a bag of misconstruction; cork it up in a bottle of malevolence and hang it up in a skein of street yarn; keep it in a hot atmosphere and shake it occasionally for a few days and it will be fit for use. Let a few drops be taken before walking out and the desired result will follow.
